2024.06.14 According to Tim Stauffer, Aunt Cora worked for Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. and made periodic trips to New York on work. She had had tuberculosis as a young woman and was unable to have children.

2026.06.17 According to MBQ, he was home in the evening while our parents were at the Reading Symphony concert when he got the call that Aunt Cora had died. She had died earlier in the day, but a neighbor only found her later when they saw that the newspaper had not been collected from her porch. The symphony had played Beethoven's 9th, so our mother then associated that piece with Aunt Cora. I had heard from our mother that Aunt Cora was dressed and lying on her bed, as if having laid down for a nap.
